

The Elaine Chang Endowed Fellowship for International Peace & Development provides for availability of funding for an international internship. The award will provide support for a student pursuing an unpaid or low-paid internship in a nonprofit organization (or NGO) focused on peace and development issues (preference given to non-U.S. internships). The award will be made available in June and is intended to support full-time summer internships for 400-480 hours. (Students may begin interning part-time before funds become available.) There is one $2500 award.

Requirements:

- Applicants must be currently enrolled Evans School students graduating in December 2008 or later.
- Selection will be based on academic merit and the merits of the student's proposal as it relates to international peace and development.
- Preference will be given to students who wish to perform activities outside of the United States.
- Preference will be given to applicants who have yet to fulfill their Evans School internship requirement and to those without significant previous work experience.
- Preference will be given to internship proposals in which the sponsoring agency can provide some level of matching stipend or the student has secured resources from another source (i.e. grant).
- Students may develop their own internship opportunity or apply for a currently advertised unpaid or low-paid internship that fits the award criteria.
- The student who receives this award will be required to attend the Annual Evans School Fellowship luncheon during spring quarter.

To Apply:

Students must submit an application to the Evans School Special Fellowships Committee. A written promise of employment must be provided at time of application, even if internship is not to begin until summer. The application should include the following materials:

1. A narrative description (three page limit) of the internship the student plans to undertake, including:
 - The tasks the student will complete during the internship (you may attach an internship description).
 - The goals of the internship for the student and the organization.
 - How this internship fits your goals and academic interest. Also explain how the skills and experiences obtained relate to peace and development outside of the U.S.
 - The proposed dates of the internship.
 - A description of the contribution the organization will make toward the student's internship. This may include in-kind contributions, salary, stipends, subsidies for transportation, or other support given to the student. Please also mention any outside sources of funding that you have been awarded to help offset your summer costs (i.e. grants/scholarships).
2. Descriptive materials about the agency/organization and written promise of employment.
3. Current resume.
4. Current Evans School transcript (unofficial okay).

Application deadline Wednesday, April 25, 2008 by 4pm:

Submit applications to Special Fellowships Committee, 109 Parrington. If you have any questions, please e-mail evansjob@u.washington.edu. Incomplete applications at time of deadline will not be considered.

Application instructions: Please submit 2 copies of your application materials.
